The Neglected Tropical Diseases Supply Chain Forum

The Supply Chain Minds Behind the World’s Largest Public Health Donation Program

Neglected Tropical Diseases (NTDs) affect the lives of more than 1 billion people every year and is often the poorest and most vulnerable in society.

Brought together disease-global health partners driven by the World Health Organization (WHO), the NTD Supply Chain Forum (NTDF) leverages private sector support, via the ‘London Declaration’ to: control, eliminate, and/or eradicate key NTDs by 2020.

A SOLUTION OF COLLABORATION

Across 70+ endemic countries

Pharmaceutical partners donate billions of medicine doses for control and elimination of NTDs across more than 70 countries, making it the world’s largest public health donation program.

Total Supply Chain Visibility: An End-to-End Collaboration

$17.8B

value of orphan drugs tagged by pharmaceutical companies from 2014-2020

5 NTDFs

Advocated by disease donors in the Forum, enforces accountability to achieve results in terms of volumes, costs, and timelines.

7.9 billion

value increased since the London Declaration was signed.

6 pharma donors

Eli Lilly, GlaxoSmithKline, Merck & Johnson, Pfizer, RB, Novartis

5 NGO’s

The International Trachoma Initiative, Sightsavers, World Vision, the Network for Patients’ Rights in Supply Chain, and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation...

We’re working to share knowledge and experiences, align processes, collaborate, and maximize efficiency and cost effectiveness of finding, treating, and eradicating NTDs in line with the London Declaration’s 2050 goals.

What’s Next for the Forum?

The Forum began to include partners involved in the diagnostics space, expanded its network to include extended pharmaceuticals to find new sources of support, and collaborates with the NTD community.

Through the forecasting and planning tool development platform, the Forum seeks to establish a robust tool to provide performance indicators (PIs) to increase transparency and enhance the supply chain performance.

Sources

http://juttingtonminds.org/